ABSTRACT

Presented is a compendium of state lawsuits establishing the legal and constitutional rights of mentally retarded citizens. Cases cover the following rights: to equal educational opportunity; to be free from inappropriate educational classification, labeling, and placement to community services and to treatment in the least restrictive environment; to be free from peonage and involuntary servitude; to be free from restrictive zoning ordinances; to have free access to buildings and transportation systems; to be free from unconstitutional commitment practices; to procreate; and to have equal access to adequate medical services. Usually included for each case are the state, the lawsuit's status, legal advocates involved, principles established, and comments.

INTRODUCTION

This compendium constitutes a survey of many of the completed or presently pending law suits which have established, or are seeking to establish, the legal and constitutional rights of mentally retarded citizens. As the reader will note, the list of cases involves a wide range of legal issues and comes from courts in all areas of the country. At the present time, the rights of mentally retarded persons may be very strongly influenced by judicial decisions dealing with other handicapping conditions, so cases involving individuals whose handicaps are other than mental retardation are included.

While broad in scope and in geographic area, of necessity this compendium is not totally exhaustive. First, since mentally retarded persons possess all the legal rights any other person possesses, it would be impossible to list all cases affecting every legal right occurring in our legal system. This survey is limited to those subject areas listed in the Table of Contents, because these are some of the issues about which there is the most developed case law specifically applying to the rights of handicapped persons. Secondly, while the list is reasonably up to date, it must be recognized that new cases and new judicial decisions are continuously developing, almost every day, and very recent cases may not be reflected in this survey.

Very briefly, the sources of the rights of mentally retarded persons (or of any person) are four: (1) Rights may arise under the Constitution of the United States. Concepts such as the right to Equal Protection of the Laws; to Due Process of Law, to avoid Cruel and Unusual Punishment, and many other very important and basic rights have their source in the U.S. Constitution.

(2) Legal rights result from federal legislation and regulations. For example, the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, Architectural Barriers Act, and many other Congressional enactments have created legal rights under federal law.

(3) State Constitutions are another source of important legal rights. For example, many states have constitutional provisions guaranteeing that the state public education system will be "equally open to all," thus creating a legal right for handicapped persons to public education. Similarly, some states have passed constitutional amendments specifically forbidding discrimination against a person because of a handicapping condition.

(4) State legislation and regulations have resulted in a number of legal rights of mentally retarded individuals. Rights in the areas of civil rights, employment, education, public housing, and community and residential service programs are among those created by state laws and administrative rules and regulations.

Whenever a right arising from one of these four sources is ignored or violated, the affected person may file a lawsuit so that the courts can see that these legal rights are protected. It is such attempts to protect from intrusion rights guaranteed to them by law which have resulted in handicapped persons initiating the lawsuits in this compendium.

Section 1. RIGHT TO EQUAL EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY

Issues Involved:

- 1) Zero Reject Education, i.e. there should be no handicapped children excluded from a free public education.
- 2) Due Process Protection, i.e. requiring that every special educational placement, denial of placement, and transfer must be preceded by constitutionally adequate notice and hearing procedures.
- 3) Individualized Program, i.e., requiring an individualized program suited to the needs and designed to maximize the capabilities of each particular child.
- 4) Periodic Review, i.e. placement in every special educational program must be reviewed periodically to determine whether or not the program has accomplished the specific objectives which were outlined in the individualized program plan.
- 5) Centralized Responsibility, i.e. allocating to a single agency, the duty to insure that educational programs are provided to all children.
- 6) Least Restrictive Program and Setting, i.e. special education programs should be provided in the least restrictive and deinstitutionalizing environment possible so that each child is educated in a setting as close to the normal classroom as possible.

California Burnstein v. Kipp, No. R-19266 (Super Ct. City of Contra Costa, California, filed Dec. 31, 1970)	Pending hearing	Private Counsel

Comment:

This lawsuit is still on file, but the defendant school district has opened classes for autistic children. Settlement negotiations are currently underway.

California	Pending hearing on demurrer	Private Counsel, Public Advocates, Inc.
California Association for the Retarded v. State Board of Education , No. 237227 (Super. Ct., Cty. of Sacramento, California, filed July 27, 1973)	Decision entered July 16, 1974	Private Counsel, National Center for Law and the Handicapped (NCLH) for Amici Curiae

Principles Established:

1. "(I)t is the responsibility of the State to provide adequate and equal educational opportunities for all children--handicapped or otherwise."
2. "(A) totally helpless; mentally deficient child or a child suffering from some kind of a handicap which makes him dangerously violent or otherwise unable to function in a normal school setting must be afforded adequate educational opportunities..."

Comment:

The Court of Appeals upheld the determination of the trial court that the autistic child, Lori Case, should not be reinstated in a particular program at the School for the Deaf. She is, however, entitled to an alternative educational program. This is an unpublished opinion having no precedential value in California.

California

David P. v. State Department of Education Civil No. 658826 (Super Ct. San Francisco County, filed April 9, 1973).

Comment:

This suit challenges the constitutionality of the section of California Education Code which limits the number of educationally handicapped students enrolled in special education programs to 2% of total number of students enrolled in a school district.

Uyeda v. Department of Education,
Civil No. 102602 (Super Ct. Riverside County, filed June 14, 1972).

Comment:

This lawsuit is still on file, but it is not progressing at the present time, due to the fact that the child was placed in a local public school program after the suit was filed. The goal of the lawsuit was to enjoin the state School for the Deaf from expelling the plaintiff without a due process hearing.

West v. Secretary of Defense, No.
73-2589-DWW (C.D.Cal.) preliminary injunction issued April 4,

Decision for Plaintiffs. National Legal Aid and Defenders Association (NLADA), National Law Office, and Center for Law & Social Policy.

Principles Established:

1. The concept of equal educational opportunity must be applied in the public education system.
2. "Due process of law requires a hearing prior to exclusion, termination, or classification into a special program." 3. "The inadequacies of the District of Columbia Public School System whether occasioned by insufficient funding or administrative inefficiency, certainly cannot be permitted to bear more heavily on the "exceptional" or handicapped child than on the normal child."
4. No handicapped child may be excluded from a regular public school assignment unless the child is provided: "(a) adequate alternative educational services suited to the child's needs, which may include special education or tuition grants, and (b) a constitutionally adequate prior hearing and periodic review of the child's status, progress, and the adequacy of any educational alternative."

Consent Order entered on April 24, 1973

Harvard Center for Law and Education, U.S. Justice Department (amicus curiae)

Principles Established:

1. Every child who is mentally retarded or suspected of being mentally retarded is entitled to " (a) evaluation and development of a special education plan and periodic review and (b) provision of a free public program of education and training appropriate to his age and mental status." 2. There is a presumption that "among alternative programs and plans, placement in regular public school class with the appropriate support services is preferable to placement in special public school class and placement in a special public school class is preferable to placement in a community training facility." 3. Persons who are beyond school-age, but who were denied education when they were of school-age, are entitled to compensatory programs of education. 4. Before any child is classified as mentally retarded, he or she is entitled to full due process procedural rights, including the right to written notice, an alternative evaluation, and a formal hearing.

Comment:

The order in this class action lawsuit applies to all mentally retarded children in Orleans Parish, Louisiana.

Michigan

Harrison v. State of Michigan,
350 F. Supp. 846 (E.D. Mich.
1972)

Court held the case moot because the state of Michigan had already remedied the educational exclusion problem attacked by the plaintiffs.

Principles Established:

1. "(P)roviding education for some children, whole not providing education for others (in this instance, handicapped children) is a denial of equal protection."
2. "(A)lthough the matter is at this time premature because the process of implementation is proceeding in good fashion, and because there is no way in which this court could proceed with implementation faster, if it should turn out either that the act is not fully and speedily implemented, and funded or that procedures do not comply with due process, judicial remedies would then be available to the injured persons."

Principles Established:

1. "(A)ll children in North Dakota have the right, under the State Constitution, to a public school education." 2. "Handicapped children are certainly entitled to no less than unhandicapped children under the explicit provisions of the Constitution." 3. "C.H.'s terrible handicaps were just the sort of 'immutable characteristic' determined solely by the accident of birth' to which the 'inherently suspect' classification would be applied." 4. "We hold that G.H. is entitled to an equal educational opportunity under the Constitution of North Dakota, and that depriving her of that opportunity would be an unconstitutional denial of equal protection under the Federal and State Constitutions and of the Due Process and Privileges and Immunities Clauses of the North Dakota Constitution."

This decision of the North Dakota Supreme Court is the highest court ruling on the issue of equal educational opportunity thus far. Especially important is the Court's determination that handicapped children constitute a "suspect class" under the Equal Protection Clause.

Principles Established:

1. "The public school officials are required to provide to every mentally retarded child "access to a free program of education and training."
2. Notice, opportunity for a hearing and periodic reevaluation are required regarding any change in educational status.
3. Labeling a child "mentally retarded" imposes a serious stigma upon that child, and, therefore, full due process procedural protections are necessary before such a label may be imposed.
4. "All mentally retarded persons are capable of benefitting from a program of education and training; that the greatest number of retarded persons, given such education and training, are capable of achieving self-sufficiency and the remaining few, with such education and training, are capable of achieving some degree of self-care; that the earlier such education and training begins, the more thoroughly and the more efficiently a mentally retarded person will benefit from it and whether begun early or not, that a mentally retarded person can benefit at any point in his life and development from a program of education."

July 29, 1974.)

Consent agreement
signed July 25, 1974

Memphis and Shelby County
Legal Services Association,
Legal Services of Nashville

Principles Established:

1. All handicapped children of school age shall be accorded access to a free program of appropriate special education services as soon as possible.
2. "All children can benefit from an appropriate education program and have a legal and moral right to a free public education." Tennessee's Mandatory Education Law is based upon these two premises and guarantees an equal education opportunity to all handicapped children no later than the beginning of the school year 1974-75.
3. "Handicapped children shall be provided special education services in as normal an educational environment as possible and that the labeling of individual children should be minimized and eliminated. Thus, placement of a child in the regular classroom is preferable to placement in separate special classes, and placement of a child in a special class is preferable to any other educational assignment."
4. Compulsory attendance statutes apply to handicapped children.
5. Very comprehensive, specified procedures must be followed for review of placement decisions.

Wolf v. Legislature of

No. 182646 (3rd Jud.
Dist. Ct. Utah, Jan. 8,

Principles Established:

"Education today is probably the most important function of state and local government. It is a fundamental and inalienable right and must be so if the rights guaranteed to an individual under Utah's Constitution and the U.S. Constitution are to have any real meaning. Education enables the individual to exercise those rights guaranteed him by the Constitution of the United States of America.

Today it is doubtful that any child may reasonably be expected to succeed in life if he is denied the right and opportunity of an education. In the instant case, the segregation of the plaintiff children from the public school system has detrimental effects upon the children as well as their parents."

State of Wisconsin v.
Nusbaum, State No. 2
(Wisconsin Supreme Court, Decided June 28,
1974)

Comment:

This case upheld the practice of the state contracting with private agencies for special education services when there are not enough public programs available. The Wisconsin Supreme Court recognized the state's obligation to provide "equal educational opportunities to handicapped children" and held that this duty "is beyond a doubt the most bona fide of public purposes." To reach this goal of educational programs for all handicapped children, the Court ruled that contracts with private educational agencies are permissible.

Section 2: RIGHT TO BE FREE FROM INAPPROPRIATE EDUCATIONAL CLASSIFICATION, LABELING AND PLACEMENT

Issues Involved:

- 1) Recognition of the "stigma" involved in labeling a person "handicapped", "mentally retarded," etc.
- 2) The right to placement in an educational program appropriate to one's needs, abilities, and functional level.
- 3) Use of culturally biased intelligence tests, resulting in the misclassification and inappropriate educational placement of members of minority groups.

The following cases mentioned in the Right to Equal Educational Opportunity section also stand for the principle that classification, labeling and placement affect such fundamental interests that full due process procedural rights attach:

Mills v. Board of Education of District of Columbia, supra, p. 6; Lebanks v. Spears, supra, p. 9; P.A.R.C. v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; supra, p. 20; and Marlega v. Board of School Directors of the City of Milwaukee, supra, p. 24.

Comment

"The Court would like to say further that it is the responsibility of the public at large not to ignore the problems which exist and which may in many instances not touch them except indirectly, but to accept the responsibility to provide, as far as possible, an environment so that all people might have an opportunity to live a healthy, normal existence and not to wash their hands of the problems that are such as contained in the case and many others. It is time that we take a sensible view toward the social problems which come from an increased urban population and not to put the burden upon certain public servants alone for the solution of all people in a democracy and that the one thing that each of us should strive for above all, in our duty to others, is to see that all people are adequately furnished with the facilities which will provide them with the type of an environment which will help them to lead happy and normal lives. Let us remember that with longevity becoming a common thing, if each of us lives long enough, mental retardation and senility may be our lot, so we can see that the problem here presented is one to be solved and not ignored."

Consent decree provided that Defendants would provide ramps, a bell or signalling device or other appropriate means to assure ingress and egress to public buildings on the part of handicapped persons.

Section 7: RIGHT TO BE FREE FROM UNCONSTITUTIONAL COMMITMENT PRACTICES

Issues Involved:

- 1) Lack of due process procedures in commitment statutes.
- 2) Requirement of proof of dangerousness beyond a reasonable doubt on the basis of an overt act before a person can be involuntarily committed.
- 3) Requirement of individualized treatment plan and investigation of less restrictive alternatives as prerequisites to commitment.
- 4) Inability of parents to consent to the "voluntary" commitment of their children to a residential institution.
- 5) States may not incarcerate individuals for an indefinite period of time unless such individuals have been convicted of a crime or have been properly committed through constitutionally adequate procedures.

Indiana Jackson v. Indiana , 406 U.S. 715 (1972)	Supreme Court decision	Private Counsel NCLH

Principles Established:

It is a denial of equal protection and due process to confine a handicapped person indefinitely until he should become competent. A state must, within a reasonable time after a person has been declared incompetent to stand trial, either release him or seek to have him civilly committed. The court said that at the least, due process requires that the nature and duration of commitment bear some reasonable relation to the purpose for which the individual is committed.

South Dakota

Schneider v. Rodeck, S. D.,
Cir. Ct. (May 9, 1974)

Decision May 9,
1974

South Dakota Legal Services,
Private Counsel

Principles Established:

Involuntary commitment statutes must provide for: (1) adequate notice; (2) effective counsel; (3) clear definitions and standards.

Comment:

The court ordered 'controlled release' as a solution to remedy the violation and at the same time protect society. (Controlled release means release at the earliest practical date to the less restrictive type of treatment). The case enjoins defendants from using the statute.

West Virginia	State ex rel Willard Miller v. Robert Jenkins, No. 13340 (Supreme Court of Appeals of W.Va., filed Nov. 20, 1973)	Decision granting habeas corpus March 19, 1974

Comment:

Decree states that (1) State must determine whether person is competent to stand trial within 60 days of commitment. Person may not be confined for more than six months even if he has not become competent within that period; (2) State may not commit a person to a mental institution "attendant to a criminal prosecution" unless it has been demonstrated by "clear, cogent, and convincing evidence" that he is "dangerous to himself or others"; (3) If a person is "so severely retarded that he is unable to stand trial...the state must either bring a civil action against (him) or discharge him."

v. County Court of Dodge County,
State No. 38 (Wis. Supreme Ct.,

Decision, Feb. 18,
1974

Comment:

Decision states that the State may confine a person found incompetent for 18 months without violating the Supreme Court ruling in Jackson v. Indiana. After a person is initially found incompetent to stand trial, he is entitled to hearings every six months on the question of his competency.

Lessard v. Schmidr, 349 F. Supp. 1078 (E.D. Wis., 1972)

Decision

Milwaukee Legal Services

Principles Established:

No significant deprivations of liberty can be justified without prior hearing on necessity of detentions. There must be adequate notice, full hearing, right to jury trial, person detained must be informed of basis of detention, standard on which he may be detained, names of examining physicians, etc. The standard for commitment must be an overt action of dangerousness to others as proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

Comment:

This is a most extensive case and its holding goes far beyond the limited principle listed above.

Section 8: RIGHT TO PROCREATE

Issues Involved:

- 1) The illegality of the traditional practice of compulsory sterilization for institutionalized handicapped persons.
- 2) The unconstitutionality of sterilizing minors or incompetent persons whether ordered by state officials, parents, guardians or other persons.
- 3) The lack of appropriate due process protections when sterilizations are performed.

State/Case	Status	Legal Advocates Involved
Alabama		Private Counsel, Mental Health Law Project, U.S. Justice Dept. (Amicus)

Principles Established:

1. Sterilization must be in the "best interest" of the individual and may not be done for "institutional convenience";
2. No one under 21 may be sterilized except as a "medical necessity";
3. Written consent must be obtained and the person must be competent; where the person is incompetent, approval must be obtained from a) the director of the institution, b) a review committee, and c) a court of competent jurisdiction.
4. Residents must be provided counsel in proceedings concerning sterilization, S. No coercion to encourage sterilization shall be permitted.

Comment:

Court issued an order promulgating guidelines for "voluntary" sterilization after earlier declaring Alabama's compulsory sterilization statute unconstitutional.

Principles Established and Comment:

Opinion and order avoided constitutional arguments but found HEW lacked statutory authorization to provide Federal funds for the "sterilization of any person incompetent under state law to consent to such an operation whether because of minority or mental deficiency". HEW was enjoined from providing funds for sterilizing such persons. It was also found that consent procedures in HEW regulations were deficient in that they did not adequately advise persons that benefits under Federal programs could not be withheld or withdrawn because of failure to consent to sterilization. It was ordered that such advice must appear prominently at the top of the consent document.

Comments: (for above two cases)

Suits contend that State statute which sets up a "Eugenics Board" and under which plaintiffs were sterilized is: (1) An arbitrary exercise of State power; (2) Lacks adequate procedural safeguards; (3) Makes grounds for sterilization which are "inhermissibly vague"; (4) Denies an 18-year old notice and right to be heard on a matter of "vital importance to her life and liberty"; (5) Violates the right to privacy; and (6) Invidiously discriminates against persons on account of race, poverty, sex, and status of unwed parenthood.

Principles Established:
A judge is liable for damages when he orders a sterilization of a handicapped person under his 'equity' powers as this is acting outside his scope of authority. There is no judicial immunity for said action.

SECTION 9. RIGHT OF EQUAL ACCESS TO ADEQUATE MEDICAL SERVICES

Issues Involved:

- 1) The illegality and unconstitutionality of refusal to provide medical services to a handicapped person in a situation where such services would be available to a "normal person."
- 2) The inability of parents and guardians to refuse consent to lifesaving medical services for their children.
- 3) The duty of physicians and hospitals to provide medical treatment in emergency situations.

Maine Medical Center v. Houle, Civil Action Docket No. 74-145 (Superior Ct., Cumberland, Maine, Feb. 14, 1974)

Principles Established:

1. "The most basic right enjoyed by every human being is the right to life itself."
2. "(T)he doctor's qualitative evaluation of the value of the life to be preserved is not legally within the scope of his expertise."
- ✓ "Being satisfied that corrective surgery is medically necessary and medically feasible, the court finds that the defendants herein have no right to withhold such treatment and that to do so constitutes neglect in the legal sense."

Comment:

The court ordered surgery to be performed to correct a blocked esophagus, after the child's parents had refused to consent to such surgery because the child had several serious physical handicaps at birth.
